PENNSYLVANIA JUVENILE JUSTICE SYSTEM RESPONDS TO THE CORONAVIRUS PANDEMIC

The unprecedented and dynamic nature of the worldwide coronavirus pandemic has required courts and probation departments across the Commonwealth to take swift action in order to effectively continue operations in a manner that protects the health and safety of court personnel, youth and families, and members of the public.

This article highlights the following current actions affecting Pennsylvania's juvenile justice system:

- Orders made by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court;
- Advice of the Juvenile Court Judges' Commission to juvenile courts and probation departments regarding youth in placement; and,
- A summary of a survey of juvenile probation departments regarding the impact of the coronavirus on their local court proceedings and operations.

PA Supreme Court Issues Orders in Response to the Coronavirus

In response to developments regarding the spread of the coronavirus (COVID-19) and its impact on court operations, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court recently issued two Court Orders.

The first order, issued on March 16, 2020, declared a statewide judicial emergency until April 14, 2020, related to COVID-19. In this Order, the Court directed the entire Pennsylvania Judiciary to consider -- on a district-by-district basis -- the appropriate measures to be taken to safeguard the health and safety of court personnel, court users, and members of the public.

The Order issued on March 16, 2020, authorized President Judges to declare judicial emergencies in their judicial districts through April 14, 2020, or for part of that period, should they deem it appropriate. Furthermore, upon the declaration of a judicial emergency in a particular judicial district, the Order authorized the President Judge to:

- Suspend time calculations and deadlines relevant to court cases or other judicial business;
- Consider additional uses of advanced communication technology to conduct court proceedings;
- Take other necessary actions permitted by the Rules of Judicial Administration; and
- Arrange for the provision of essential judicial services.

In this second Order, the Court suspended all time calculations and deadlines relevant to court cases or other judicial business also through April 3, 2020. As in the initial Order, the Court authorized and encouraged the use of advanced communication technology to conduct emergency court proceedings.

The second Order outlined essential functions as:

- Emergency bail review and habeas corpus hearings;
- Gagnon 1 hearings;
- Bench warrant hearings pursuant to Pennsylvania Rule of Criminal Procedure 150;
- Juvenile delinquency detention;
- Juvenile emergency shelter and detention hearings;
- Temporary protection from abuse hearings;
- Emergency petitions for child custody;
- Emergency petitions for guardianship;
- Civil mental health reviews (50 P.S. §302);
- Any pleadings or motions relating to public health concerns and involving immediate and irreparable harm; and
- Any other function deemed by a president judge to be essential consistent with constitutional requirements.

Juvenile Court Judges' Commission Issues Guidance to Juvenile Courts and Juvenile Probation Departments Regarding Youth in Placement

Considering the extraordinary operational adjustments to both court and probation proceedings during these unprecedented times, the Juvenile Court Judges' Commission (JCJC) issued guidance to juvenile court judges and juvenile probation departments to ensure the proper care and attention continues to be provided to all juveniles and families, with an emphasis placed on juveniles in out-of-home placement.

On behalf of the Juvenile Court Judges' Commission, JCJC Executive Director, Richard Steele, sent correspondence to all juvenile court judges and chief juvenile probation officers noting that despite these extraordinary times, judicial districts have continued to find ways to review cases and make release decisions on an individual basis in a method that takes all relevant matters into consideration. The means by which these hearings are being held has varied greatly, although a common denominator to most has been the use of advanced communication technology: teleconference, various videoconferencing capabilities, emailed written reports/recommendations, etc. The outcomes of these placement review hearings appear to be similar to those of the pre-Coronavirus past: some youth remain in placement, some youth are released under continuing supervision. Some jurisdictions are reviewing at some level all cases where youth are currently in placement specifically to determine whether an early release may be appropriate.

Mr. Steele continued by announcing the JCJC strongly recommends that timely proceedings related to the review of juveniles in out-of-home placement remain a priority of juvenile court functions during the pandemic crisis, and that every consideration be given to the release of youth, or to alternative dispositions, when this can be accomplished in a safe manner and within the mandates of our Balanced and Restorative Justice mission. While every youth has their own individual characteristics and situations to be considered during these reviews, outcomes that ensure that the least restrictive alternative to disposition be utilized remains a mandate of our Juvenile Act. Consideration of release is particularly important for youth with health issues that may make them particularly vulnerable at this time. When appropriate, the reduction in the number of youth in placement will play a vital role in maintaining the health of the youth, as well as facility staff.

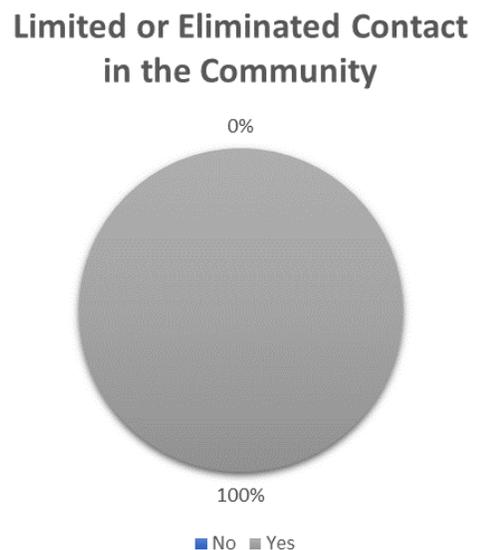

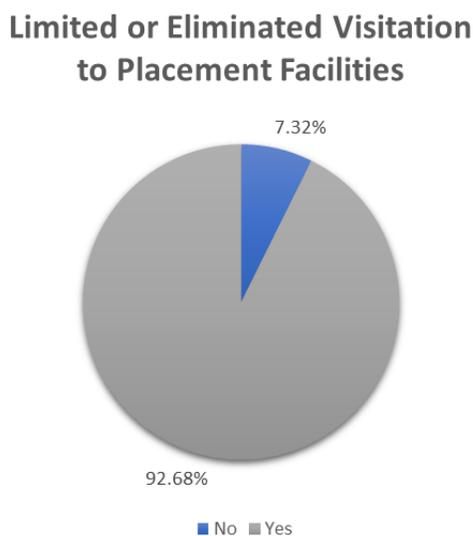

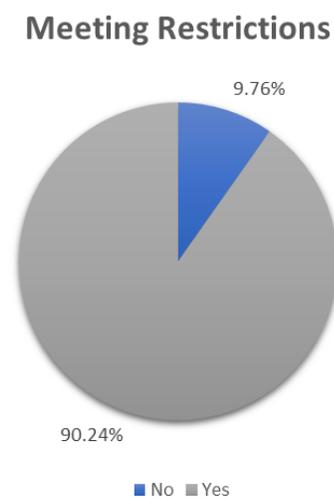

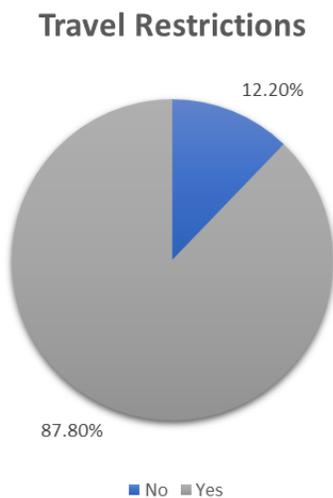

In closing, Mr. Steele commented that in these unprecedented times, it is critically important that our juvenile justice system remains viable, including, and perhaps especially, the provision of focused attention on our youth in out-of-home placement. He thanked all juvenile court judges and chief juvenile probation officers for their incredible efforts under these extraordinary circumstances and their continued work and commitment to youth and their families.

Juvenile Court Judges' Commission Surveys Juvenile Probation Departments

The Juvenile Court Judges' Commission (JCJC) was interested to learn more about the impact the coronavirus (COVID-19) is having on the local business practices of Pennsylvania's juvenile probation departments and court proceedings. In an effort to understand the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, the JCJC developed and distributed a survey to collect data which could aggregately represent these impacts statewide.

The survey was distributed to all chief juvenile probation officers. Forty-one surveys were completed during the pre-identified timeframe of Thursday, March 26th through Friday, March 27th of 2020. A summarization of the analysis is included below, this data is representative of forty-one juvenile probation departments in Pennsylvania, 61% of juvenile probation departments in the state.

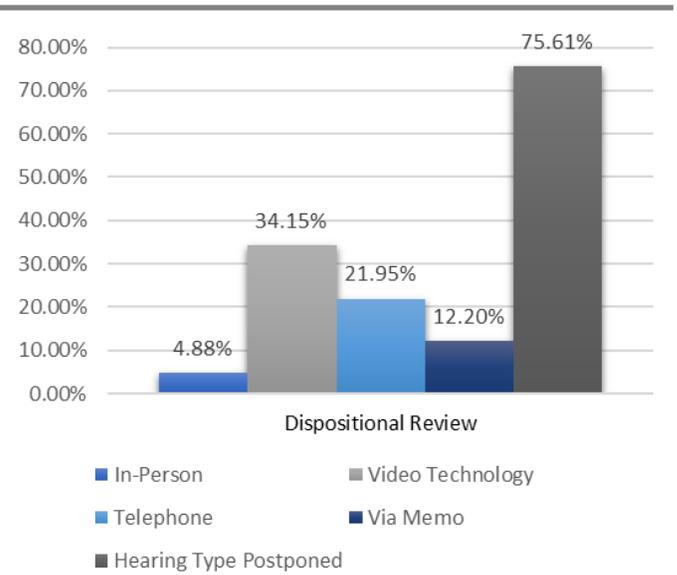

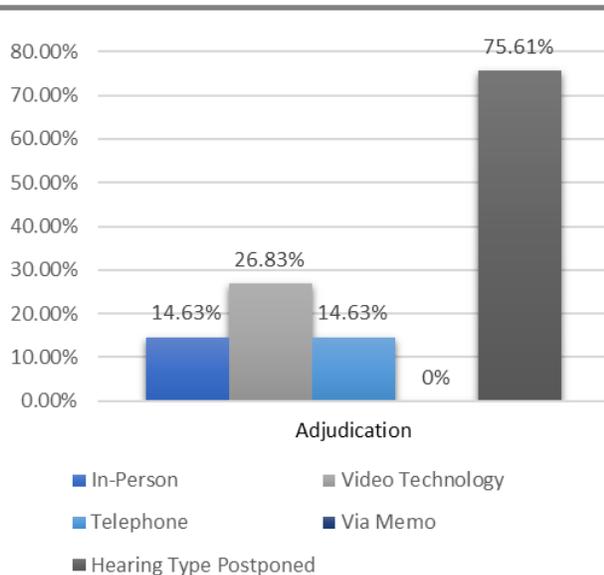

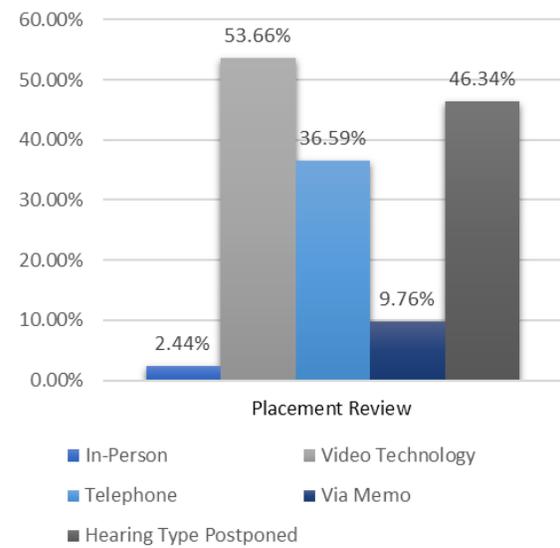

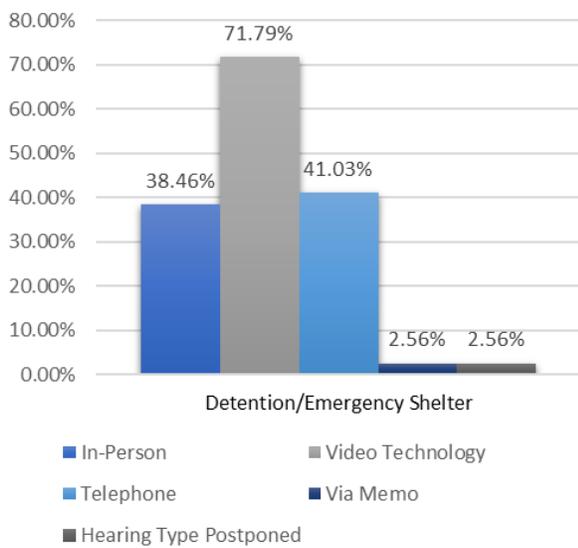

In the majority of juvenile probation departments participating in the survey, business practices have been modified in response to COVID-19. These modifications include travel restrictions; large meetings, conferences, training, and community event meeting restrictions; and limitations or the temporary elimination of juvenile probation officer visitation to placement facilities and/or with youth and families in the community. The graphs below illustrate this data:

Additionally, the majority of respondents indicated modifications to the intake process and changes to office coverage in juvenile probation departments.

- 48.78% (20 = n) of departments report the intake process is on hold as no intakes are occurring at this time, 39.02% (16 = n) reported intakes continue to occur by telephone, and 4.88% (2 = n) reported in-person intakes continue to occur. 13 respondents (31.71%) reported “Other” indicating intakes are also continuing with the support of various methods of advanced communication technology. For those departments continuing with the intake process, the initial YLS is being administered in 61.29% (19 = n) of departments.
- 2 (4.88%) departments reported no changes in their department’s office coverage during this situation. The remainder of respondents indicated office coverage has been modified (some departments are reporting greater than one modification); in 43.90% (18 = n) of departments all staff are rotating shifts in the office, in 31.71% (13 = n) of departments select staff are rotating shifts in the office and in 19.51% (8 = n) of departments select staff are working remotely to name a few of the modifications.

Relating to court proceedings, the majority of responding juvenile probation departments reported continuation in the scheduling of detention/emergency shelter hearings and placement review hearings as necessary while postponing adjudication and disposition review hearings where appropriate. As recommended in the March 16, 2020 Order of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, the majority of departments are utilizing advanced communication technology to conduct essential court proceedings. The tables below illustrate this data:

Furthermore, the majority of juvenile probation departments participating in the survey have reviewed the caseloads of youth in residential care for the purposes of early release and work to ensure continued service delivery.

- 73.17% (30 = n) of departments report having reviewed the caseload of youth in residential care for the purposes of making decisions regarding potential early release, where appropriate, and 26.83% (11 = n) of respondents indicated this has not occurred within their department.
- In the past two weeks, 43.90% (18 = n) of departments have released youth from residential care, 31.71% (13 = n) have released youth from detention, 39.02% (16 = n) from probation supervision and 4.88% (2 = n) from shelter care. For this question, respondents were able to select all that applied.
- 92.68% (38 = n) of departments reported youth are receiving some form of community-based interventions and aftercare support services during this period of time, and 7.32% (3 = n) reported youth are not receiving these services.

During these unprecedented times, and always, the JCJC will strive to provide continued support and technical assistance whenever possible. If you believe we can be of assistance, please do not hesitate to contact Executive Director, Richard Steele at ricsteele@pa.gov; Deputy Director, Robert Tomassini at rtomassini@pa.gov; or any of our JCJC staff. We extend well wishes of safety and health to all.

2019 JJSES IMPLEMENTATION SURVEY RESULTS

The 2019 Juvenile Justice System Enhancement Strategy (JJSES) Implementation Survey results are now available on the Juvenile Court Judges' Commission (JCJC) website www.jcjc.pa.gov. The report includes an executive summary of the statewide aggregate data; JJSES activity specific narratives; and infographics. In continuation of the JJSES Implementation Survey results multi-part newsletter series, the JCJC is eager to share the Effective Practices in Community Supervision (EPICS) infographic to illustrate the implementation and sustainability of Stage Three of the JJSES in Pennsylvania.

Stage Three of the JJSES builds from the information amassed from the screening and assessment practices established in Stage Two with a focus on behavioral change. Stage Three includes such tasks as putting in place cognitive behavioral programs, applying responsivity information to referral decisions, ensuring that programs are evidence-based, and giving case management staff the competencies and tools necessary to ensure that their one-on-one sessions build skills that address criminogenic needs. As an integral component of Stage Three of the JJSES Framework, the EPICS model assists juvenile justice professionals in facilitating such behavioral change.

The EPICS model is designed to use a combination of monitoring, referrals, and face-to-face interactions to provide the offenders with a sufficient "dosage" of treatment interventions and make the best possible use of time to develop a collaborative working relationship. The EPICS model helps translate the risk, needs, and responsivity principles into practice.

In response to the coronavirus pandemic, the EPICS Train the Trainer event previously scheduled to take place April 20, 2020 through April 24, 2020, has been postponed. This training event will be rescheduled as soon as possible. Please contact Angela Work, JCJC Director of Quality Assurance in Juvenile Justice, at awork@pa.gov or Robert Williams, Berks County Chief Probation and Parole Officer, at rwilliams@countyofberks.com to obtain available EPICS related resources.

TRAUMA INFORMED DECISION PROTOCOL TRAINING

On March 11, the Trauma Informed Decision Protocol Training (TIDP) took place at the Days Inn Penn State. Participation was outstanding with juvenile probation representatives from each of the 12 counties participating in the Trauma Expansion Project in attendance. Additionally, representatives from Crawford and Venango Counties attended as they were the initial Pennsylvania counties working with Dr. Keith Cruise in a National Trauma Protocol Pilot to implement the use of trauma screening and the TIDP for juvenile justice agencies. In total, there were 55 participants present.

Dr. Keith Cruise, Associate Professor in the Department of Psychology and Adjunct Professor of Law at Fordham University, along with Graduate Student Anthony Fortuna, provided an overview of the TIDP, strategically walking through each step of the Protocol with participants. They also provided instruction to increase attendees knowledge of traumatic event exposures and trauma reactions as responsivity factors and then linked the TIDP to Pennsylvania’s case planning process.

The TIDP is a document that assists in the integration of trauma and behavioral health screens and risk/need assessment results into a replicable framework for juvenile justice case planning based on the Risk-Need-Responsivity model. The TIDP is a 9-step decision-making framework that facilitates consideration of trauma-specific information as responsivity factors and how they may impact criminogenic needs. This is how the TIDP enhances the focus on a trauma-informed or trauma-responsive case planning process.

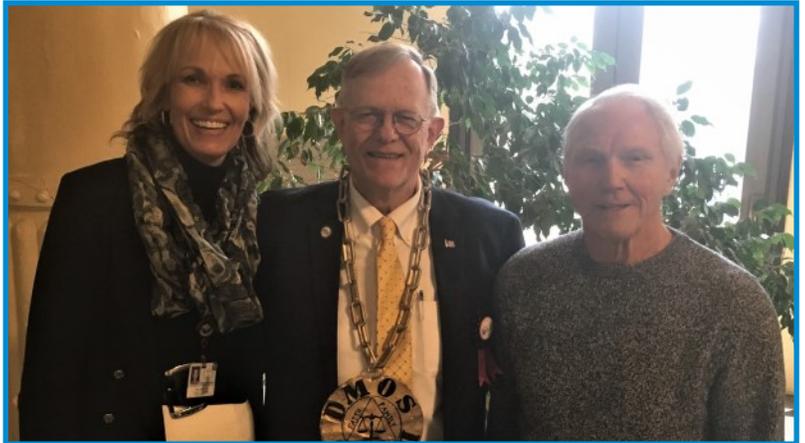

Pennsylvania began the Trauma Expansion Project in July of 2019 with the Child Trauma Screen (CTS). The CTS is a brief screen of lifetime traumatic event exposure and current trauma symptoms. The CTS has been validated. Validation of the cut-off scores indicates promising accuracy in identifying youth who endorse significant trauma symptoms. There are ongoing validation studies with juvenile justice involved youth in Connecticut.

In the eight months since the Trauma Expansion Project kicked-off, juvenile probation representatives from 12 counties have participated in training, implementation and data collection of the CTS. Additionally, the CTS has been integrated into the Juvenile Court Judges’ Commission’s (JCJC) Pennsylvania Case Management System (PaJCMS). This integration allows for data entry, record keeping, and the analysis of county-level and aggregated data. With the recent TIDP training, the Project will now move into a new phase as counties work to implement the TIDP into their local policy and practices.

If you have any questions regarding the Trauma Expansion Project, please contact Angela Work, Director of Quality Assurance in Juvenile Probation at the JCJC at awork@pa.gov or Jay Leamy, Deputy Chief Probation Officer in Chester County at jdleamy@chesco.org.

JCJC POSITION ANNOUNCEMENT UPDATE

In light of the coronavirus and the impact it has on the Commonwealth, a general freeze on all hiring is in effect for all agencies under the Governor’s jurisdiction. Therefore, the Juvenile Court Consultant position announced in the January issue of the “Pennsylvania Juvenile Justice” newsletter, is impacted by this action. The Juvenile Court Judges’ Commission will provide further details as they become available.

RESEARCH BRIEF

Creating a website that archives pertinent, quality materials pertaining to our JJSES has been a project of the Pennsylvania Council of Chief Probation Officers' Research Committee for the last couple of years. We are happy to announce that the website is up and running. The direct link is https://www.viethconsulting.com/news_archive_headlines.php?org_id=PCJP&snce=0#. It can be found under the "Resources" tab on the main page of the Chiefs' Council's webpage and the title of the page is "Research Committee." The site covers research on a wide range of topics such as the YLS, family factors and youth reoffending, and the right dosage and duration of interventions. It also contains a keyword search tool. The research article described below is summarized on this website, though in a somewhat different format.

O'Hara, K. L., Duchschere, J. E., Shanholtz, C. E., Reznik, S. J., Beck, C. J., & Lawrence, E. (2019). Multidisciplinary partnership: Targeting aggression and mental health problems of adolescents in detention. American Psychologist, 74(3), 329–342. <https://psycnet.apa.org/doiLanding?doi=10.1037%2Famp0000439>

This article offers a unique look at the challenge of initiating new evidence-based therapeutic programming in the juvenile justice system, and the potential for collaboration between researchers and practitioners. The authors, clinical psychologists at Arizona State University, detail how they worked with a multidisciplinary team to create a novel program for males in a county detention center with demonstrated aggression and other mental health problems. They sought to take acceptance and commitment therapy (ACT)—an evidence-based approach for adults convicted of domestic violence—and adapt it to juveniles who had directed aggression toward family members. The scope and nature of the intervention that the researchers envisioned was transformed by the partnership that they initiated with probation officers, court-based psychologists, court administrators, and judges. This multi-disciplinary team incorporated ACT's focus on personal values into interactive group therapy sessions that also addressed triggers, family dynamics, and other contextual factors related to youth violence against family members. The advice of practitioners was crucial to improving the content of the therapy. For example, a judge's advice helped the team refocus a session designed for adults on how childhood experiences affected their behaviors into an activity in which "participants are instructed to write characteristics of family members on slips of paper. Based on their identified life values, they create a visual 'chain' to help them decide if they would like to 'add another link' by continuing the behaviors of family members or 'break the chain' by acting differently" (p. 332).

Initial study results were encouraging, though only preliminary given methodological limitations. Study youth showed statistically significant declines in "experiential avoidance" and perceived progress in moving toward their self-identified values, as well as declines in depression and anxiety (recidivism data was still being collected). The researchers encountered roadblocks to finding an adequate control group for evaluating their program and were working with their practitioner partners to try to solve that problem for the larger study that they will attempt in the future.

Possible Implications:

1. The article contains specific advice for how researchers and practitioners can collaborate effectively to develop and implement innovative programming rooted in evidence-based principles; the article could be consulted by both researchers and practitioners.
2. Practitioners who are thinking about bringing in research partners from outside the court system might consult this article in thinking through the model partnership they would like to create.
